Not your grandfather's landscapes...

Landscape photography has evolved quite a bit since the days of Ansel Adams. There was essentially one approach; making traditional, objective images, with as much depth of field and sharp detail as possible. When color photography arrived, blue skies and saturated colors were paramount, resulting in a lot of great work, but also a lot of generic "calendar art" that barely engaged the viewer.

In this issue, we present five of a new breed of landscape artists. They still pay great attention to detail, tones and colors, but they add motion, depth, drama, and emotion to captivate the viewer with new perspectives on the world around us. We know you will enjoy their images.

Also, we're developing new ways to present PH Magazine to you for future issues. This is a rather costly process, so your donation is more helpful than ever as we work to make the transition happen. Be sure to follow our website and Facebook page for the latest news, images and updates. Your continued support is much appreciated.

Rafal Maleszyk

Hawaii based photographer working in black and white, creates classic landscapes as well as new work including plastic. This is a metaphor for the disrespect by people for the Nature. "Is that how the world will look like soon? Plastic will grow on the trees?" Plastic Landscapes is a unique idea of connecting extra element with natural world. Rafal offers limited edition photographs , some large prints are limited to just 1 some 5 unique prints.
